

ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION OF MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE

ALUMNAE ACHIEVEMENT AWARD 2013

PRESENTED TO

Nancy Bermeo '73

NANCY BERMEO, CLASS OF 1973, we honor you today with the Alumnae Achievement Award. It is presented to alumnae whose accomplishments and service to society exemplify the values and virtues set forth by the College.

As a distinguished political scientist, professor, and research scholar, your work focuses on key challenges facing us in the twenty-first century, including the ability of governments to respond to economic challenges and regime change, and the role of citizens in a global society.

For many years, you were on the faculty of Princeton University, where you hold the title of professor emeritus and visiting senior research scholar at the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies.

Since 2007, you have been the Nuffield Professor of Comparative Politics at Oxford University, where you also direct the Oxford Centre for the Study of Inequality and Democracy. There, you research the causes and consequences of regime change, with particular attention to Western Europe and Latin America.

You have written or edited countless scholarly publications, including ten books. The most recent is Coping with Crisis: Government Reactions to the Great Recession. You have received numerous research and teaching awards, and have served your profession by chairing and serving on multiple committees of the most prestigious associations as well as on the editorial boards of leading journals.

For your teaching and research contributions to the field of political science, the Alumnae Association is honored to present you, on your fortieth reunion, with the Achievement Award.
